Pacific plantain

Pacific plantain is sometimes used informally to refer to the subgroups of banana that were domesticated in the Pacific region and belong to the AAB genome group, namely Iholena and Maoli-Popoulu.

Pacific Plantain is also the name of a Maoli-Popoulu cultivar\(^1\).

References

1. Entry for Pacific Plantain in MGIS (Musa Germplasm Information System)

Also on this website

Photos of Pacific plantains in the Musarama image bank

Contributors to this page: System Administrator.

Page last modified on Tuesday, 13 September 2016 15:11:52 CEST by System Administrator.
The original document is available at http://www.promusa.org/Pacific+plantain